Present Progressive and Simple Present

The simple present is used to talk about routines, or things you do over and over again. Some time words that go with this tense are "usually," "often," or "every day."

Example: Chris goes to the park every day.

The present progressive (or present continuous) is used for things that are happening right now. Some time words that go with this tense are "now," "right now," or "at the moment."

Example: Chris is calling to Sara right now.

Use the picture to help complete sentences about what the people are doing in the park today.

Sara Chris Jorge Eva Pablo José Juan José	1) Sarah and Eva usually (play)
5)
6)
7)

