a. Read the story carefully. Then, circle the correct answers.

When most people think of Peru, they picture old ruins or nature. But travelers often forget that Peru also has many great beaches to visit. In fact, Peru has a whopping 2,500 kilometers of coast. It is just waiting for you to explore!

Mancora is a popular town in the far north of Peru. It has pure blue waters and huge waves. This makes it a popular surf spot. For much of the year, Mancora is a sleepy town of 8,000 people. But in the summer, people flock from all over. They come to enjoy the waves and the fun atmosphere in this small beach town. Nearby is Cerros de Amotape National Park. Here, you can get up close and personal with all kinds of animals! You could even see a boa constrictor!

Another famous beach town in Peru is Huanchaco. Some people say that this is where surfing was invented. Almost 5,000 years ago, many people fished in the waters here. After fishing, they would ride waves back to the shore in their boats. An ancient city named Chan Chan is nearby. It is now protected as a World Heritage site. You can take a short drive from the beach to see the ruins. Then you can return to your comfy beach chair in the evening. A visit to Peru's beaches is a great way to see all this country has to offer!
