The history of post

Hermes was the first 'postman-god'. According to mythology, Hermes was said to be the son of Zeus and Maia. Besides leading the dead people's souls to Hades, Hermes brought good luck, wealth, sleep and was the messenger of the gods living on Mount Olympus. His head used to be printed on Greek stamps of the past.

The invention of stamps is closely related to the invention of modern paper during the Industrial Revolution. At that time, people also started to learn how to read and write. In earlier times, only the rich people and the rulers of countries sent messages with their servants. The messages were written on various materials, such as the skin of a sheep and tablets made of clay. Papyrus (a kind of plant that mostly grows in the Nile Valley in Egypt) was used by the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

Modern paper started being made in England by the 15th century. Horses and guides carried mail using the five main roads leading to London from different parts of the country. This mail service belonged to the King. It was His Majesty's Mail. It goes without saying that if he wished to read a private citizen's mail, he could easily do so.
