

British newspapers

Listen to the audio and fill in with the names of newspapers:

«The Sunday Times», «Financial Times», «The Guardian»,
«The Observer», «The Daily Telegraph», «The Times»,
«The Sunday Telegraph»

In Great Britain there are daily national newspapers and Sunday newspapers. All newspapers are divided into serious papers and popular papers. Serious newspapers are usually broadsheet in format. They offer features such as sport sections, financial reports, book reviews, women's pages, and art summaries.

The oldest of the daily serious papers is It contains important home, overseas and business news, financial and sports articles.

..... is famous for its lively reports and its original features. It is compact in size.

..... is known for its detailed reporting and good international news coverage, as well as its detailed coverage of sport.

..... specializes in business and economic. It is a British daily newspaper printed in broadsheet.

The serious Sunday newspapers offer large sections on literature and the art, business and sport. They come with colourful supplements, free magazines or television guides. The most popular Sunday newspapers are and, which is the oldest Sunday paper. is a British conservative broadsheet newspaper that is known for its detailed news and sports reports.