One of the most serious challenges in any society is to raise the educational standard. Raising the educational standard means having the highest level of education that enables students to make use of what they learn and to enjoy it as well.

It can be argued that the most important reason for raising the standard of education is wealth. If you have money, you can provide all the needs for the educational system. You can also have all the digital resources at your school. In addition to all, you can give due interest to the teacher who is considered the backbone of the educational system. One more thing is solving the problems that students may face whether they are social or concerned to learning itself. Consequently, you will have the best educational outputs that can help in improving your country.

A second reason for raising the standard of education is the improved training for teachers. If you prepare teachers well, you will raise the quality of the educational output who is the student himself. Also, providing training for teachers in various educational fields would help teachers understand the challenges of their students and help them overcome them. Finally, if the teacher is excellent, the student will be the same as his teacher and he will be his model that he will follow.

Finally, the third reason is parental support and encouragement which is not less than the other two causes. But for parents, educational standard can hardly exist. Parents advise their kids to like study and always provide them with all what is new like iPads, computers and internet to be up-to-date with all modern educational resources. Also, parents play the role of teachers at home as they help their kids at home and connect with teacher to know how their kids progress goes on.

It is possible to find many other reasons for raising standard of education like providing more resources at school and acquiring students the culture of achievement. We should concentrate on providing money, improving training of teachers and the parental support and encouragement, as those are the main steps of raising the educational standard.
