Wanna be famous?

We asked three students this question. Here's what they said.

Emma, 16: 'I'd hate to be famous. I think I'd get really about being followed around everywhere by the paparazzi. I'm quite a person and don't like being the centre of attention, so not having a private life would be hard for me.'

Tom, 14: 'I'm not the idea of being famous and getting recognised everywhere you go – that would probably be fun for a while, but then you'd get sick of not being able to do anything without people wanting selfies with you. It would become I think, having to talk to everyone all the time, especially when you're tired or in a bad mood.'

Valentina, 13: 'Would I like to be famous? I don't think so. I actually think it would be quite a life because you'd have to hide away from journalists and fans all the time and you wouldn't be able to go out with your friends. And you'd have to cope with people writing comments about you on social media. No thanks!'

HUGH JACKMAN

Hugh Jackman, star of Wolverine and The Greatest Showman, likes his fans. Instead ⁰ of ignoring them, he makes the effort to talk to them, and ¹ of this, he's known as one of Hollywood's 'good guys'. It seems that ² being world-famous, this Australian actor is still an ordinary person.

In 2016, a 9-year-old boy with a serious illness was on a radio show, sitting in the studio and asking Jackman questions in a phone interview. When he asked Jackman what his favourite line in Wolverine was, ³ of answering him, Jackman came into the room himself and gave the boy the answer! They said a few lines from the film together and ⁴ to the actor, the boy became one of his favourite fans.
