V. Read the passage and decide if the following statements are True (T) or False (F).

Fossil fuels (oil, coal, and natural gas) are very important in the production of energy, although they produce a lot of carbon dioxide that harms the environment. However, they are rapidly running out because they are non-renewable energy sources.

People are looking for cleaner and safer alternative sources of energy. For example, solar energy is unlimited and is easy to get. In some countries, people put solar panels on the roofs of houses and buildings for heating and hot water. In addition, hydro power is cheap and plentiful. They are increasingly used to generate electricity. Although nuclear power is also clean and abundant, it is dangerous and may cause serious accidents.

Viet Nam still relies heavily on fossil fuels for energy at the moment. Before other renewable sources of energy become popular in Viet Nam, we need to limit energy consumption to protect our environment.
