Isabella Stewart Gardner

Isabella Stewart Gardner (April 14, 1840–July 17, 1924) was an art collector. She started collecting art after her father died in 1891. She liked to travel and collect artwork from all over the world.

In 1903, Gardner built an art museum in Boston in the United States. It was special because it was not just an art museum, it was her home. This is where she kept her possessions: furniture, textiles, letters, pictures, and paintings. She collected paintings from Rembrandt, Manet, Sargent, and many others.

Gardner wanted people to enjoy the museum after she died. She wanted it to be used for education. So, if you visit the museum today, you can see her personal collection of objects in the same place it was when she died in 1924.
