UTP is a public Colombian institution located in Pereira. It has a very big campus where students can transit with no restrictions. There are 17 buildings. These buildings correspond to different facilities: faculties, library, planetarium, administration, sports area, etc. There are some ATMs (automatic teller machines) located in buildings 5 and 1, so students can withdraw money in a secure place.

There is a big, modern library called Jorge Roa Martinez where people from all the city come to study and to find information.

There is not any private bus service which belongs to the university, but there is an excellent public transportation service during the whole day.

Many people come by car to this university, but there is a problem: there is little space for parking and a lot of students and workers have difficulties finding a place for their vehicles. Another wish expressed by students is the amount of study modules. They think there are few study modules. On the contrary, there is a lot of open space and nature that oxygens the place.

Around 19.000 people come every day to this campus that is not open for much time. The university is open from Monday to Sunday 14 hours a day. It's a place that offers many services to its community and some fame to the region.

E.g. Fine arts and humanities is building # 12 in the UTP. This building corresponds to the

In the second floor there are many offices and an art gallery where you can see different art work exhibitions.

In the fourth floor there are many offices for the administrative staff of the different programs which correspond to this faculty.

In the fifth and 6th floors there are many classrooms. There are not any libraries but there is a study module and a lot of green space. There are few bathrooms and little space free of noise.

There is a small size cafeteria where many students from different programs come to have lunch because its food is good.

There is not a photocopy place in this building.

This building is beautiful, modern, and the people who work there are very friendly.
