LIVING ABROAD: Dan's story

Dan Anderson was born in the U.S.A. He's now living in South Korea. We asked him, "How did you [] living in Seoul?"

Dan: Well, it's a long story! Before I came here, I [] three years working for a small company in Tokyo while I [] doing my master's in business. To be honest, I wasn't [] leaving or anything. But one day, I [] to be in the office, and one of the salespeople was looking at job ads online.

He knew I was [] going to South Korea someday – you see, my mother's South Korean, and I've always been interested in the culture and everything – and anyway, he leaned over and said, "Dan, this [] to be the perfect job for you. Check this out."

I looked at the ad, and I [] thinking, "Should I [] to apply?" But I [] to go for it, even though I didn't [] to get it, and to make a long story short, I got the job!

The company [] to transfer me to Seoul, and they [] to pay for my Korean language lessons. I [] working here two months later. And the rest is history. I mean, I [] living in Japan, but you can't have it both ways, I guess. Actually, I can't [] living anywhere else now!
