Lindy loves the winter and all the snow that comes with it.

There was just one problem. She wanted to learn to ski. She was jealous of all her friends who knew how to ski weekends during winter. "Mom, why can't I learn know how to ski?" asked Lindy.

"I didn't think you wanted to learn how to ski," said mom.

"You never seemed interested and you never asked". "I'm asking know," said Lindy. "Can I learn to ski?" Mom said she would ask Lindy's dad and let her know soon.

That night, mom and dad talked about Lindy leaning to ski. "It's a lot of money to learn to ski and to get all the equipment," said dad. "I don't know. I think it's too expensive. We don't have much money now." "But all her friends are skiing, and I don't want her to feel left out," said mom.

The next day Lindy ran home very fast, she opened the kitchen door. "Mom, mom!", shouted Lindy. "The best thing in the world happened!" "We are having a ski trip. Our teacher, Ms. Lucas pay for it. She wants to take five students who want to learn to ski", said Lindy. She was very excited. "She said I could go, and it would only cost the money for the bus." "Please, can I go?" asked Lindy. "What about all the equipment like skis, boots and helmets?" asked mom. "Yes, because a special company is paying for the trip and everything." "Wow, that's too good to be true!" said mom. "Let me call Ms. Lucas!"

The next day Ms. Lucas talked to Lindy's mom and everything was true. Lindy's dream came true. Lindy and her classmates finally arrived at the ski lodge. They learned everything about the skis and how to use the ski poles. Lindy went down the hill with her teacher and skied very well. When she got home, she told her mom and dad about the great time she had and how well she did. What was even more exciting for Lindy was that her parents bought her a new pair of skis. She was very surprised. "Wow! You're the best! This is the best time of my life!"
