DEPRESSION

We all know what it's like to get sad 1) ... time to time. Sometimes, something as simple as getting a low 2) ... in a school test can make us feel upset. It's far different, though, to feel 'depressed'. Although the word is frequently used as an alternative to the word 'sad', it's far more serious. Clinical depression, apart from 3) ... an intense feeling of sadness, is also a medical condition that can last for a considerable period of time. During that time, people suffering from depression lose interest and pleasure in nearly all activities and very often 4) ... themselves by not eating or bathing, for example. When someone becomes depressed, they often have to pay 5) ... visits to a psychiatrist as well. Although it may seem obvious, the best way to prevent depression is to do things that make you feel happy. So, next time you're feeling a bit down, get out of the house and enjoy all the wonderful things that life has to offer.
