There Is Song

The Beautiful South

_____a bench in every park dedicated to Those who sat there once but didn't make it through _____names carved deep in bark on every tree

By those who spent their time like you and me

And wherever geography may place you now _____a piece of history all folk carry around

Whatever your situation, whatever it may allow _____an even larger piece in every lost and found _____song, there's always a song

Wherever _____perfection there's a wrong _____always song but a broken bond

And an unkissed frog in every village pond

_____a name that we graffiti'd up on a wall

To the folks who live there now, makes no sense at all

And in every underpass, on every street

A promise someone made but couldn't keep

A tiny piece of chalk in every coat

In every film the smallest lump in throat

In every song you've sung in every novel read

That unkissed love will rear, rear its head _____ song, there's always song

Wherever _____a right there's always wrong

There's always a song but a broken bond

And an unkissed frog in every village pond
