Reading

1

Hi. I'm Badria. I come from the UAE and I live in Dubai. I am studying international relations at university and I have been asked to say a little bit about multiculturalism here in the Emirates.

2

Well, I shall start by saying that most of the population of Dubai is made up of expatriates! That may surprise you, but it's true. Expatriates make up an amazing 85% of the total population. It's so interesting to see people from all over the world on your doorstep — in the shopping centres, museums, outdoors and at work.

3

We can learn so much from each other, about what is important for each of us, how we all view the world ... Maybe we will understand each other better as a result. I think integration is a really good, but not always easy thing.

4

There are some difficulties for the international community though. One barrier is the language barrier. Arabic isn't the easiest language to learn to speak or read and write in. But I guess that's the same for anyone living in a country that speaks a different language.

5

I also think that some Emiratis are concerned that their culture is going to disappear because of the number of expatriates living here. At the same time, we need people to come here to work in the different professions and, who knows, what the country would do without them!
