PUSS IN BOOTS

Once upon a time, there lived a talking cat.

One day, the cat said to his master, who was a poor, miller's son, "Give me a hat, a pair of boots and a bag, and I have a plan to make you rich and famous."

Puss in Boots, as he was called, was a smart cat. He caught many lovely birds and rabbits, put them in his bag, and went to the King.

He bowed to the King and said, "Your Majesty, I bring you a gift from my noble master, the Marquis of Carabas."

Now the King did not know who the Marquis of Carabas was. In fact, it was a name that Puss made up. But he was very pleased with the gift.

From that day, every morning Puss caught an animal and gifted it to the King.

One day, the King was going for a ride in the forest. Immediately, Puss told his master, "Please go bathe in the river in the forest."

As soon as his master was in the water, Puss took his clothes and hid them under a big rock.

Puss then ran towards the King's carriage and shouted, "Help! Help! The Marquis of Carabas is drowning!"

When the King heard that the kind Marquis who had given him so many gifts was in danger, he sent his men to save him.
