Tom's dinner

There was a man called Tom Boll. Everyone knew about him because he could eat an awful lot. One day, a rich man came to see Tom. He thought Tom was bragging so asked him, "Tom, how much can you eat at once?"

"I can eat a whole sheep and ten loaves of bread," Tom answered.

The rich man did not believe him and wanted to give Tom a test. He said, "Tonight, I will prepare dinner at my house. If you can eat them all, I will give you five gold coins. If you can't eat them all, then you will give me one gold coin. What do you say?"

Tom immediately agreed and followed the rich man to his house. The man told his maid to prepare a whole sheep and ten loaves of bread for dinner. Tom finished them all in just half an hour. When there was no more, Tom still hadn't had enough. He asked, "Is there anything else?"

The rich man was very surprised, but he replied, "Well, we have just slaughtered an ox. If you are still hungry then you can eat it." The rich man wanted to see how much Tom could eat until he was full.

Tom finished the whole ox in just twenty minutes. The rich man became very angry. He shouted, "If you can't do anything but eat, then take the coins and leave!"

Tom left the rich man's house with a happy belly and five gold coins.
