Questions 11–20

Look at the sentences below about a writing competition.

Read the text on the opposite page to decide if each sentence is correct or incorrect.

The Competition

This year, Youth International Magazine is asking you to take a look at museums. Have you got a favourite museum near you? Is there a great little museum in a nearby town or village that doesn't have thousands of visitors? Do you think it deserves to be better known? Then write about it in an article for our competition.

Just last week, a reader emailed us about the Llangollen Motor Museum.

"It's not particularly well known but I really like this museum. It's interesting and has 60 vehicles like this old British-made motorbike from the 1930s. But best of all, most of the vehicles there are still in use. Comments in the museum's Visitors' Book included 'Funny and educational' and 'Excellent but very strange!'"

Your article could talk about what your favourite museum is for, who goes there and why, when it was started and by whom, how it is paid for, etc. You could interview staff at the museum and the people who visit it in order to get the information you need.

How to enter

- Research and write a magazine article on the subject of 'my favourite museum', giving it your own title.
- The article should be no longer than 600 words, it must be typed on A4 paper and written with double line-spacing.
- Articles must be written in your own words, but your family and friends can offer ideas and suggestions.
- You can include original photographs or illustrations, but this is not necessary.
- Please keep a copy of your work as it will not be returned.
- Remember to put your name, age, address and telephone number at the top or on the back of each page of your entry.
- The closing date for entries is 11th March, so make sure your article is posted to us well before that date.

Winning articles

The winning article will be published in September's Youth International Magazine and the winner will receive the top prize of a writing weekend at Hartside College of Journalism. There will be at least two other prizes of books for very good entries, the number of these depending on the quality of the articles entered into the competition.

- 20 An additional two, or more, writers will win books as prizes.

Finding Rebecca

From the age of six when I first saw Olympic gymnastics on television, I knew gymnastics was for me. I immediately started once-a-week gymnastics classes and by my 13th birthday I was spending more than 16 hours a week in the gym. I didn't have much spare time but I was happy. True, parts of my body would sometimes hurt, but I was proud of myself. I was a gymnast!

Then my knee began to hurt, and kept getting worse. So I stopped practising for a while. But one day, my team was getting ready for a big competition, and my coach asked, 'Do you want to take part?' I nodded slowly. I knew what was coming – coaches are not known for their kindness. 'Then you've got to practise your piece,' he demanded. I did, but at the end I had to be carried out of the gym. The idea that my gymnastics career might be over was too terrible to think about.

I spent a year recovering and finally I started training again. I worked hard and entered competitions. But I soon realised gymnastics didn't make me as happy as it once had. The next summer, I was training hard to reach the next level, spending all my time in the gym. But by the end of the holiday, I was asking myself, 'Is this worth it? Could I, Rebecca, just be myself and not a gymnast?'

With the start of school came homework, increased gym workouts, and extreme tiredness. I wanted to be like other high-school students, hanging out and going to the movies. That term, I stopped going to the gym. I found I could change my identity. Now, I'm happy being myself – just Rebecca.
