Are you looking for something to do at the weekend? Do you want to help people? We've got the answer!

Teenagers know a lot about technology. We can email, message our friends, surf the internet and play video games. But some people don't know how to use computers. Can your gran or grandad get information from websites or chat online? Our group visits older people in their homes and we teach them computer skills. So, we are looking for teenagers to join us. We visit people in Langdown town centre and up to five kilometres outside Langdown. You don't earn any money, but we pay for your travel.

So, why are you waiting? It's great fun and we're helping a lot of people!

Emmy

This is a brilliant idea! My gran is seventy and she lives 200 km away from us. I'd really like to chat online with her. She's got a computer, but she isn't very good at using it! I hope there's a group like this near her.

Jack

Yes. I want to join. There's an old man opposite us and he never gets visitors. I'd like to help him. Sometimes older people don't have family near them. Then the computer's important.

Pippa

I belong to the group. It's very good. I visit three people in the town centre. They love learning and now they're very good. They can visit websites, download information. One man is writing a story with his computer!
