Then, four weeks ago, a reporter from the local TV station interviewed members of the group for a programme about people taking part in the festival. A week after the interview, Amber was on TV and everyone in her class saw the programme. They wanted to come and see her dancing at the festival. This made Amber feel even more nervous!

Three days before the competition, Amber felt totally terrified. She phoned Lauren and Katie and told them she didn't want to take part. They came to her house the day after she phoned to talk to her. They were really good friends and they persuaded her to do it.

That was the day before yesterday. But today something absolutely amazing happened. When Amber walked on stage she didn't feel nervous. She just felt really excited and she enjoyed every minute of the show. Step Up! didn't win the competition, but they came second. All her friends thought they were better than the winners. Maybe next year!

- What did Amber tell her friends on the phone?
