On the next page, there are advertisements for eight different types of accommodation.

Decide which accommodation would be the most suitable for the following people.

For questions 6–10, mark the correct letter A–H on your answer sheet.

6

Stephen wants to live alone. He would like to be somewhere near downtown. He loves city life and enjoys going out with his friends.

7

Martha and her dog would like to live somewhere peaceful. They enjoy long walks in green areas.

8

Joe and Peter would like to live in a house with other students. They would each like to have their own room. They would like to be close to public transportation.

9

Beatrice works and travels a lot. She would like to live somewhere temporary. She owns a car.

10

Theresa wouldn't mind having a roommate who's clean and tidy. She loves doing exercise and eating out.

A Cheap and Cheerful

Do you have better things to spend your money on than rent? Are you willing to share accommodation? Look no further! Rooms for rent in house opposite Penn Station. Connections to most subway lines. A great option for working professionals or students.

E Amazing Apartment

Large apartment with plenty of light! It's right next to the airport but has special windows that reduce noise. There are two bedrooms, and it includes some furniture like a bed, shelves and sofa. There is also a stove in the kitchen. You can take the train into the city.

B Room for Rent

Join this students' house if you are young and ready to party. We don't care if the house is not clean or tidy. We know that fun is more important. There is one small room available with a closet and a bed. The bathroom is shared.

F Cute Cottage

It's walking distance from several large parks and in a quiet and safe neighborhood. It's ideal for couples or single people, but no children are allowed. We welcome pets (if they're well trained). You'll have private access to a small garden. It's in a convenient location near stores and public transportation.

C Apartment with Furniture

Small but comfortable apartment with modern furniture and everything you need really close to downtown. It even includes a washing machine and dryer. There's an underground parking garage. Pets and children are welcome. It's available for short- and long-term stays.

G Friendly Apartment

This apartment is suitable for wheelchair users. It's on the ground floor and there are no steps. There is an outdoor parking lot. No pets allowed in the building. The neighborhood is lovely and quiet. Minimum one-year contract.

D Luxury Apartment

You can live right downtown, surrounded by great cafés and clubs. It has one bedroom, with large windows and plenty of light. You'll have an amazing view from the thirteenth floor. It's only a short walk from a train station and mall. No pets allowed.

H Roommate Wanted

I'm looking for someone to share my apartment in the south of the city. It's a great neighborhood with lots of restaurants and bars. The building has a pool and a gym. I am very clean and never messy and am looking for someone similar.

Teenager Survives Nine Weeks in the Australian Desert

Matthew Allen, an 18-year-old accounting student, left home without his cell phone, extra clothing or any food. It is believed that he wanted to test his survival skills by living in the wild. After he didn't return home that night, his family got worried and called the police to report that he was missing. Everyone searched for him, but there was no sign of him. It was November and one of the hottest Australian summers on record. Temperatures were so high that bush fires were a constant problem. Weeks went by and his family became more anxious. There was less hope that he was still alive. A police officer working on the case, Uriah Baker, said, "Anyone who is missing for that length of time in those conditions... you wouldn't expect to see them again."

But nine weeks after he disappeared, Matthew was found. He weighed just under forty kilograms, having lost almost half his body weight after so long in the wild. He was covered in bites from mosquitos and other insects when he was rescued. He had lost some of his sight, and was almost blind as a result of not drinking enough water.

Even though he was very sick when they found him, the police could not believe that he had survived for so long with so little food and water. What is even more surprising was that Matthew did not want to be found and had remained hidden from people searching the area. Mr. Baker said, "He must have kept out of the way of us."

How he stayed alive is a mystery. He only had access to small amounts of food and a little water from a near-dry river. He had no tent or shade and was living only on his own skills. He was discovered by two people walking in the area. When they saw him, he was unable to stand because of serious injuries to his feet and legs. He was very confused and did not seem to know where he was. A helicopter was sent immediately to take him to the nearest hospital.

The police department believes that Matthew might have been depressed before leaving home. His mother, Deborah, said that "getting Matthew well" was the only thing that mattered to her family, but she did not want to answer any further questions after the awful time her family had been through.
