URBAN SPORTS: DO YOU LIVE IN A CITY?

A TEEN PERSPECTIVE

Do you want something exciting to do in your spare time? 17-year-old Jon Harrison tells us why urban sports are just what you're looking for.

REPORTER First of all, what are urban sports?
JON Activities like skateboarding, BMX biking, scootering and parkour (free running).
REPORTER Who does them?
JON Teenagers and people in their 20s, mainly. Most people who do urban sports want to have fun with their friends and do something active.
REPORTER Where do they practise?
JON Anywhere! You don't need any special facilities for urban sports. You can jump or skateboard over walls, and cycle down steps. Every city has these things – and they're free!
REPORTER Do you need any special equipment?
JON Depending on the sport, you need a skateboard, BMX bike or scooter and a helmet. Parkour is the only urban sport that you can do without any equipment.
REPORTER What do you wear?
JON We wear jeans or shorts, a T-shirt and trainers!
REPORTER Are urban sports dangerous?
JON That depends. Accidents happen when people try to do dangerous things. It's important to know what you can – and can't – do.
REPORTER Are there urban sport competitions?
JON Yes, there are.
REPORTER Do girls do urban sports?
JON Yes! Lots of girls are getting interested in them now. They are often as good as boys, or better!
