

Friend: Hello, Philip, Are you doing a photography course?

Philip: Yes, there wasn't one at my college, Park College, so I go to City College in South Road.

Friend: Are your classes in the evening?

Philip: Yes, I finish at Park College at quarter past five and get home about SIX. The lessons start at quarter to seven I have just enough time to eat

Friend: How much are they?

Philip: My ten-week course IS usually ninety-five pounds. But It costs me seventy-five pounds because I'm a student There's also a five-week course for fifty-five pounds.

Friend: Is it a good course?

Philip: Yes, great. The cameras are rather old, but my photos are much better now, so I'm really pleased I'll never be. a famous photographer though.

Friend I think taking photographs is difficult

Philip: Well, we did animals first and they're certainly not easy But then we took pictures of trees, and that wasn't difficult We'll photograph children next.

Friend: And after the course?

Philip: There aren't many jobs for photographers It'll be my hobby. I can use my father's camera but I'll have to buy a lot of film.
