Man: Queen's Theatre. Can I help you?

Woman: Yes, do you have two tickets for this week's show? Saturday's best for me.

Man: Well, all of the tickets have gone then, but we still have a few for Wednesday evening or Thursday afternoon.

Woman: It'll have to be the evening. Have you got two near the front?

Man: Let me see. I've got two seats, but they're near the back, I'm afraid.

Woman: How much are they?

Man: They're eight pounds fifty each.

Woman: OK. I'll take them.

Man: Then that'll be seventeen pounds altogether. Collect your tickets from the ticket office in Ferret Road. That's F E double R E T. The ticket office is open all day.

Woman: OK. When does the show begin?

Man: At seven forty-five in the evening. It lasts two and a half hours.

Woman: That sounds fine. Can we get to the theatre by bus?

Man: Yes, there's a bus stop just outside - take the one-three-six from the town centre. They go every eight to ten minutes.

Woman: Thank you for your help.
