The Story of Velcro*

There was an engineer in Switzerland. His name was George de Mestral. One day in 1948, de Mestral and his dog went for a walk. When they arrived home, he noticed that parts of a plant were stuck, like stickers, on his pants and his dog's fur.

De Mestral looked at the small balls from the plant. He saw something very interesting. They had little "teeth" on them! He didn't stop thinking about the plants. He wanted to make something useful with that idea.

He invented a material with little "teeth" like the plant he saw. It was very easy to open and close. He called his new idea Velcro. NASA used Velcro on their clothes for astronauts, and they loved it.

Now people who make clothes, bags, and shoes use Velcro a lot. Look at your clothes and your shoes. Are you wearing anything with Velcro today?

* Velcro is the brand name of the most famous type of hook and loop fasteners.
