3) Choose the correct option.

1. I agree with what you say to some extent / potentially, but I have some reservations.

2. Curiously / Happily, the latest model of this smartphone doesn't seem that much more advanced than the previous one.

3. 'Shooter' video games may happily / potentially make players less sensitive to real-life violence.

4. Arguably / Sadly, the digital revolution of the twentieth century affected human communication no less than the invention of print.

5. Obviously / Strikingly, if children are playing football video games rather than kicking a ball around outdoors, this doesn't help their physical development.

6. Happily / Regrettably, the new version of the software has fewer problems than the earlier one.

7. The problem was blamed on 'the system', but happily / actually it was due more to the employees not knowing how to use the system.

8. Regrettably / Potentially, many children in poor countries don't get the chance to learn computer skills.

9. Probably / Interestingly, in my class more girls play video games than boys, even though usually it's the other way round.

10. Checking information on the Internet takes less time than looking it up in books, but not if you get distracted by irrelevant and trivial content. Indeed / Curiously, you may end up wasting more time than you save.
