

What is pollution?

Pollution is when something harmful such as poison, plastic and chemicals affects the environment in a negative way.

What is water pollution?

Water pollution is when something harmful such as poison, plastic and chemicals enter the water, usually because of human activities. This affects the water in many ways. Water life often dies and the water becomes unusable, meaning that people are unable to drink the water.

What is air pollution?

Air pollution is when the air is no longer fresh and clear due to smoke, fumes and chemicals. This is caused by factories, cars, fires etc. Air pollution affects humans and animals in a negative way, causing us to breathe in unclean air. This may cause us to get seriously ill.

What is land pollution?

Land pollution is when earth's land is covered in harmful waste similar to water pollution. This waste affects the animals, plants and humans in many ways. Often this leads to farmers not being able to grow food for us to eat. Animals may eat the poisoned food and die.

What is noise pollution?

Noise pollution is made by machines and transport such as airplanes. This type of pollution affects the animals by causing confusion, bees often die from being so tired trying to find their homes. Bees dying affects people as the plants cannot produce seeds without the bees' help.

How can you help save the Earth?