COMMUNICATING THROUGH TOUCH

When we think of communication, we often think of talking or [1]_____ a text message. However, touch might be as [2]_____ for communication as words. One study tried to find out how [3]_____ we are at interpreting emotions through touch. Two strangers were asked to sit together without seeing each other. They were asked to touch each other's arms to show certain feelings. They were often able to recognise those feelings, for example when the person was annoyed or when they were [4]_____ about something. Using touch is clearly a [5]_____ that we develop and use to communicate and [6]_____ to others. However, the study showed there were some problems. Men weren't always able to understand when a woman was angry, and women weren't very good at understanding sympathy from a man.
