Driving, Safety, and Your Cell Phone

Many accidents occur every day simply because drivers fail to pay attention. One thing that takes drivers' attention away from the road is talking on cell phones.

Because talking on cell phones can cause accidents, in some places it is illegal to hold a cell phone while you are driving. Many people use headsets so they can talk on the phone and keep both hands on the steering wheel.

However, studies show that using a headset while driving does not reduce the chance of having an accident. In fact, people using headsets have as many accidents as people using handheld cell phones. The reason is this: When people talk on the phone, they are not concentrating on what is happening on the road and around them. They can see everything, but they aren't really paying attention, and they aren't focused on driving. Drivers who are talking on the phone are slower to respond to things like stop signs or a person walking into the street.

So keep your attention on the road and stay off the phone. Remember that driving requires your full attention. But if you must use your cell phone while driving, here are some safety tips:

- Use your cell phone only if it is absolutely necessary.
- Tell the person you're speaking to that you're driving.
- If possible, pull over to the side of the road when making or answering a call.
- Keep your conversation short.

Writing

Write about someone you know who is a very good or a very bad driver. Discuss his/her driving habits. Write a paragraph using the vocabulary from the unit. Include the simple past and the past continuous in your sentences.

Speaking:

Topic 1

Think about your favorite kind of car. What is special about this car? Why do you like it? Use the vocabulary and simple past and past continuous in your sentences.

Topic 2

Describe a car accident you had or saw? How did it happen? Use the vocabulary and the grammar of the unit.
