Reading

5 Read the article about famous people and their lucky possessions. Are the sentences true (T) or false (F)? There is an example at the beginning (0).

Lucky!

There are many famous people in the world with lucky possessions. They always have these with them at important times.

English footballer David Beckham has a shoe superstition*. He always had new ones for a football match and that's an expensive habit! But he isn't the only one. Helen Mirren is a famous British actor, but there aren't any new shoes on her feet when she's on the red carpet. Her special shoes are old, cheap ones (under $40) and she always wears them on important days. There are lucky shoes in other famous people's wardrobes, too: red ones are the most popular.

There aren't special shoes in the life of American tennis player Serena Williams, but there are socks. Serena wears the same socks every day in a tournament. The socks on her feet on Day One are the ones on her feet on Day Fourteen! Canadian politician Justin Trudeau likes socks, too. The socks in his collection are all in fantastic colours.

Other famous people have special clothes, gloves or toys – a rabbit, a duck or a cartoon character. But German model Heidi Klum is different. She has a small bag with her first teeth in it! What about you? Do you have any lucky possessions?

* superstition a tradition related to luck or unlucky things
