2. Pulsa el micrófono y di el nombre de cada sílaba.

The diagram illustrates a syllable identification exercise. At the top center is a photograph of a smiling mouth with red lips and white teeth. To its right is a small cartoon drawing of a person's head and shoulders. A horizontal green line extends from the mouth image, with five vertical green lines descending from it to connect to five separate mouth photographs arranged in a row below. Each of these five mouth photographs is connected by a vertical green arrow pointing down to a white square box with a blue border. The mouth photographs show different stages of articulation: the first is an open 'a' sound, the second is a 'd' sound, the third is a 't' sound, the fourth is an 'e' sound, and the fifth is an 'i' sound.
