

Use of English

Extroverted introvert

Read the text below, choose the correct answer (A, B, C, D)

You probably know about introverts, meaning they prefer to be by (1) _____, and extroverts, who love a good crowd and draw energy from others. But recently, we've heard (2) _____ about the gray area between these two -- "the ambivert."

Being an ambivert means having a flexible personality. They can swing back and forth between introversion and extraversion -- or just stay grounded somewhere in the neutral middle. Ambiverts could sell bacon to a pig. A study found that they make the best salespeople and bring in the most money. The reason? They can be (3) _____ to engage people without appearing arrogant.

Intuition is part of (4) _____ an ambivert. Unlike extroverts, who sometimes have a hard time knowing when to stop talking, and introverts, who may choose NOT to talk, ambiverts instinctively know when to listen and when to shut up.

Ambiverts are "emotionally bilingual." Because ambiverts have (5) _____ wide range of people skills, they can "connect with many ... in the same way someone who speaks English and Spanish can," scientists explained.

1	A oneself	B themselves	C yourself	D himself
2	A a lots	B a lot of	C lots of	D a lot
3	A enough enthusiastic	B enthusiastic enough	C too enthusiastic	D enthusiastic too
4	A being	B be	C to be	D to being
5	A such	B so	C such a	D so a