

PAST TENSES WITH HYPOTHETICAL MEANING

With the following expressions we use the PAST SIMPLE to talk about how we would like THE PRESENT situation to be different.

- I'd prefer it if you didn't ask me silly quiz questions.
  - I wish I could have another hour in bed.
  - If only my mind wasn't in the project, I would be able to sleep.
  - It's time I bought a new alarm clock, mine is broken and I am always arriving late.
  - It's high time she left her toxic boyfriend.
  - It's about time we started saving for a house.
  - What if we didn't pass the exam?
  - Supposing it rained today, would we go to the park?
  - Suppose you got injured, what would you do with the championship?
- She treats me as if she didn't love me.
  - They use this place as though it was a playground.

Use present simple or present perfect when the situation might be true.

- You look as though you haven't slept well for days.
- She's acting as if she is the best one in the theatre.

With, I'd rather, I'd prefer, we use infinitive when the subject of the second verb is the same or when there is no subject.

- I'd prefer to go home right now.
- It's time to go home right now.
- I'd rather go home right now.
- I'd sooner go home right now.
