Paul Nelson graduated from university and went to work overseas for a year. When he returned to his hometown, a big company offered him a very good position with a reasonably high salary. He accepted the job, but finally became bored with it and wanted to do something more challenging. Therefore, he put an advertisement in several newspapers, describing his work experience, his present responsibilities and the kind of work he was interested in.

Several days later, he got a letter in response to his advertisement but the letter was from a man who wanted a job. In his letter he wrote: "Sir, could you be kind enough to mention my name to your present employer when you get a new job?"
