A charity hero

Eddie Izzard is a British comedian and actor. He was born in Yemen in 1962, while his parents were working there. His mother was working as a nurse and his father was working for an oil company. Eddie Izzard first became interested in comedy when he was studying to be an accountant at Sheffield University, in the north of England. He started telling jokes in comedy clubs and soon became very popular. He first became famous as a comedian in 1991 and today he often appears in comedy programmes on television and at comedy events in the theatre. He even tells jokes in other languages, especially French! In 1995, he started acting in theatre plays and appearing in films. Since 1995, he has appeared in more than 30 films. In 2009, he decided to do something special to raise money for charity. Eddie Izzard is not really interested in sport and is not an active sportsman, however, he decided to run a marathon. Then, after only five weeks training, he ran 43 marathons in 51 days to raise money for a charity called Sports Aid, which helps hungry people in Africa. He ran 42 kilometres every day, six days a week for seven weeks. He ran from London to Cardiff, in Wales. From Cardiff he ran to Belfast, in Northern Ireland, and then to Edinburgh, in Scotland, and back to London. In total, he ran 1,100 miles (nearly 1,800 kilometres) in 51 days. He collected more than £1,150,000 (€1,300,000) for the charity and received a special BBC award for his charity work.
