Welcome to Villa Epecuén: Argentina's Underwater "Town that Drowned"

© Eduardo N. Portes / flickr

Villa Epecuén was an exclusive touristic town for Argentinians. People built it in 1921 around the salty waters of Epecuén Lake. It's 370 miles away from the city of Buenos Aires. Many visitors came to the town for vacations. There were many shops and hotels for visitors. One day, a dam broke and flooded the town. People left their houses and abandoned the Villa Epecuén. There is only one resident. His name is Pablo Novak.
