English people like animals very much. About 66 million people live in Great Britain. And there are about 9 million dogs, 8 million cats, 3 million parrots, lots of aquarium fish, lizards, chickens, hamsters, snakes, turtles, rabbits and 1 million exotic pets in the country. People spend a lot of money on them. They can buy fine clothes for their animals, take them to the theatre. They also spend a lot of money on delicious food for their favourite animals. There are even special shops where you can buy expensive brand clothes and special hairdresser's where you can make a hairdo for your pet.

Englishmen are fond of ravens. Seven of these big black birds live in the Tower of London. Their names are Jubilee, Harris, Gripp, Rocky, Erin, Poppy and Merlina. They can't fly because their wings are clipped. Ravens live for 40 years. The legend says when the ravens leave the Tower, it and the kingdom will fall!

English people also like gardening. They talk about it in their offices, in the shops and at home. In the evening they work in their gardens, large or small, and they do it in any weather. They grow flowers, vegetables and fruit there.
