WHAT'S THE RIGHT COLOR?

In many cultures, there are traditional colors for different situations and events.

At a Western wedding, the bride's dress is usually white. The groom's jacket is black, and the pants are black or gray. In Korea and Thailand, the bride and groom wear bright colors. In Japan, they wear traditional colorful kimonos. In China, red is the central color of the wedding. The bride's gown, the invitations, and the gift boxes are red. Even the home is decorated red on the wedding day.

Colors have different meanings, too. In the West, people wear black at funerals, but in India, they wear white. In the West, pink is the color for baby girls and blue for baby boys. But in China, babies wear red, because it means good luck.

Some colors are happy, and others are sad. Some colors are lucky, and others are not. Some colors are fashionable, and others are not. What is your favorite color?
