Telephone Songs

The first telephone song appeared in 1899 and was called Hello My Baby. In the song, a man phones his girlfriend every morning to talk to her. But first he has to speak to the operator, and he has to talk very loudly because the line is so bad. Phone calls appeared in a lot of pop songs in the 20th century, like Stevie Wonder's I Just Called to Say 1 Love You in 1984. The famous American soul singer's song was number one in several countries, like the USA, Britain, Germany and Italy and won an Oscar for Best Original Song in 1985.

In the last few years, phone songs have been about mobile phone calls. The most famous is Lady Gaga's Telephone. A woman is dancing at a club when her boyfriend calls. 'I can't hear you and I'm busy,' she says. The boyfriend rings again and again but the woman doesn't answer because she is dancing and having fun.

What will pop songs be about in the future? There will probably be more songs about social networking, like New Friend Request by Gym Class Heroes. But they will still be about love!
