He Must Swim for His Clothes

One day a teacher _____ (1) an interesting story to his class. It was a story of a man who swam a river three times before breakfast. All the pupils listened to the story, but _____ (2) asked any questions and nobody _____ (3) anything about it.

But Johnny, one _____ (4) the pupils, thought a little and smiled. The teacher thought to himself, "Something is wrong with my story." Then he _____ (5) to ask Johnny a question.

"Do you think that a good swimmer _____ (6) do that?" asked the teacher.

"No," answered Johnny. "I think that many people could do that. But why didn't he make it _____ (7) times? Why didn't he get back to the side where his clothes were? He swam away _____ (8) his clothes, _____ (9) he?"

"Well," answered the teacher. "The story tells only about a man who swam a river three times. It doesn't say anything about his clothes."

Then the teacher said _____ (10) the class, "You see, children, Johnny showed us that sometimes it is very good to think about what you have read or heard."
