Unit 8 Texting

Getting Started

You've probably heard people talk about text messaging, or texting. Text messages are short messages (usually 160 characters or fewer) sent from one mobile phone to another. It's similar to instant messaging, except that you won't need to log in—you'll just send messages directly from your phone.

Typically, texting is not free, although your mobile carrier probably offers service packages that include a certain number of texts per month (or even unlimited texts). If you don't have a texting plan, you'll generally be charged whenever you send or receive a text message.

Chat and instant messaging (IM) are short messages sent and read in real time, allowing you to converse more quickly and easily than email.

Chat and IM are generally used when both (or all) people are online, so your message can be read immediately. By comparison, an email message won't be seen until the recipient checks his email, meaning that chat and IM are better for quick messages and conversations.

The terms chat and IM are sometimes used interchangeably. However, they can have slightly different meanings:

Chat often occurs in a virtual chat room, which can include many different people who may or may not know each other. Many chat rooms focus on a particular topic or interest.

IM usually includes a list of your contacts, called a Buddy List or Friend List, which allows you to see who is online. IM is especially suited for one-on-one communication, but it's possible to send messages to multiple people at once. IM is technically a kind of chat, and some IM services use the term "chat" instead.

Exercise 1: Complete the sentences with the words given below. And answer the question.

in the real time

Instant Messaging

send messages

text plan

- 1. This month's AIS special ..... promotion allows you to send 50 free messages per month.*
- 2. When both (or all) persons are online, texting, chat, or instant messaging are commonly used....., allowing your message to be seen right away.*
- 3. IM is short for .....*
- 4. Unlike email, you don't need to log in—you'll just ..... directly from your phone.*
- 5. Which one needs logging in?*
  - a. IM*
  - b. Chat*
  - c. email*
  - d. texting*

Many people ask the same question: "Why would I send a text message when I could just call the person?" One of the main reasons is that it's faster, at least for short messages. It can easily take several minutes to "send" your message with a phone call. With a text message, the same message could be sent with a text in just a few seconds.

There are also times when it's not really possible to call someone, like if you're at a meeting, or in class, or any other place where you're not able to talk easily. Texting is often the best alternative in these situations.

Do note that typing on a mobile phone tends to be slower than typing on a computer. To speed things up, people often use abbreviations and acronyms. If you're not familiar with these abbreviations, it can be difficult to understand some text messages. To see some of the most common acronyms, check out the Top 50 Popular Text & Chat Acronyms.

Language focus

Content words and function words

Sentences usually contain a mixture of content words and function words. Content words are often nouns, main verbs, adjectives and time phrases—they are the words that give us the meaning of a sentence.

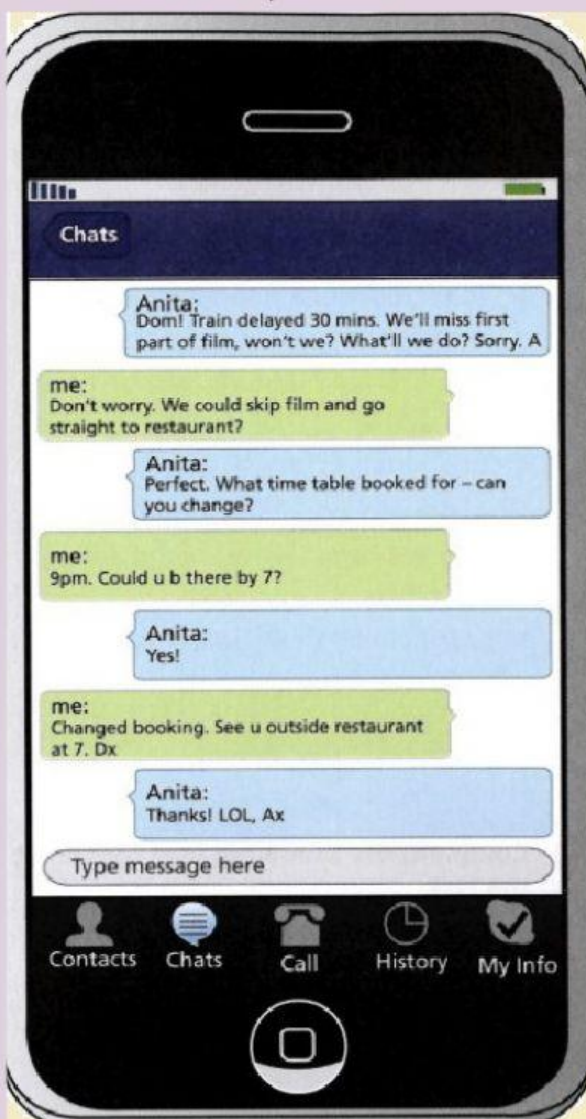

Example      There is a party at the 'Students' Union tonight.
Are you coming?

Function words are often articles, conjunctions, auxiliary verbs and prepositions.

If you remove the function words from a sentence, your reader can usually still understand the meaning, which is why we often leave them out when texting. If you aren't sure whether a word is a function word or content word, ask yourself: 'would you still understand the sentence if this word was left out?'

Example      Party at 'Students' Union tonight. You coming?

Exercise 2: Anita and Dominik have arranged to meet to see a film and have dinner, but things are not going according to plan. Read the SMS on Dominik's phone. Then answer the questions.

1. What is the problem?

2. How do they solve it?

Exercise 3: Both Dominik and Anita miss out words to make sentence shorter and quicker to type. Find the sentences where words are missing and write them out in full.

Example      Train delayed 30 mins. = My train has been delayed by 30 minutes

1. We'll miss first part of film, won't we?

2. Sorry

.....

3. We could skip film and go straight to restaurant?

.....

4. Perfect

.....

5. What time table booked for - can you change?

.....

6. 9pm

.....

7. change booking

.....

8. See you outside restaurant at 7.

.....

Looking closely
