FORM 10. UNIT 3. LESSON 5. LEARN TO BE TOLERANT

I. Listen to the radio phone-in programme.

Which question from the list were the listeners asked?

Are parents too pushy and over-protective?

Do teenagers get too much freedom these days?

Are teenagers too unruly and naughty?

II. Listen again. Who said that?

- But the amount of freedom given by the parents is a different story.
- I believe kids like me, without too many boundaries, have a much better relationship with their parents.
- But parents who set limits for their teens are usually better off.
- My parents were very strict when I was growing up.
- However, you can be over-protective by not letting your teens meet friends at all which will lead to problems later in life.
- Parents are protective because they want their kids to have more chances in their lives.
- If children get too much freedom, they indulge in bad habits.
- If you push your children too hard one way, they're going to go the other way.
