My Ride to the Dark Side: the Ghost Bus

Daniel Griffin, age 16

On a trip to London a few weeks ago, it was raining heavily one evening when my dad spotted a leaflet advertising a ghost bus tour of the city. We had been walking all day and it sounded like a fun and relaxing way to go sightseeing, so we decided to go on the tour.

Well, we didn't regret our decision. From the moment we stepped onto the 'fright bus', we had such a great time! It was a converted London double decker bus that was painted black instead of red. Inside, it looked like an old railway carriage with comfortable seats, lamps and curtains. A creepy conductor welcomed us on board.

The tour wasn't at all what we had expected. From beginning to end, it was more like a theatre performance than a bus tour. I felt a bit nervous at first but I was soon giggling along with everyone else after the conductor's introduction. He told us: "Expect to hear stories about murders, deaths, ghosts and ghouls but ... most terrifying are the comedy moments!" Along the route, he told us the history of haunted London landmarks such as theatres, underground stations and tourist attractions including Tower Bridge. Some of the stories sent a shiver down my spine, like the one about the demon barber (a mens' hairdresser) of Fleet Street. Mostly though it was just funny because the conductor was a great actor and added his own amusing twists to the stories! There was even CCTV showing rats running around the passengers' feet and spooky music to go with the scary tales.

This was a very funny and original way to see London – my dad and I are still laughing about it! This tour is suitable for people of any age and I highly recommend it.
