

What did you do yesterday?

A: I'm interviewing some people and asking, what did you do yesterday? Can you tell us about your day?

B: Sure. Um, yesterday was a [redacted] day, so I [redacted] the kids up at six o'clock and [redacted] breakfast for the family.

My husband drove the kids to school, so I [redacted] them each a big kiss and a big lunch.

A: How nice of you, you had the house to yourself. Did you relax?

B: I wish, I did chores all morning. First I did the [redacted], then I [redacted] the breakfast dishes and made the beds.

A: Did you relax then? Yes, Finally. I [redacted] my book for about 20 minutes. It was almost three o'clock and I had to [redacted] up the kids from school.

My husband [redacted] home right after we did, and we [redacted] dinner together. He is a great cook. After we ate dinner, I [redacted] the kids with their homework.
