Because of hearing problems, Edison had difficulty in following the lessons. His mother had been a school teacher in Canada and happily took over the job of schooling her son. She encouraged and taught him to read and experiment. He recalled later, "My mother was the making of me. She was so true, so sure of me". With only three months of formal education he became one of the greatest inventors and industrial leaders in history. Edison applied for one of his inventions, the electric vote recorder in 1868 but his most famous invention was the electric light bulb. He also invented the phonograph, and made improvements to the telegraph, telephone and motion picture technology.

He loved books, had excellent memory, and always showed curiosity about science. He used to say, "Genius was 1 percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration." When he died on October 18, 1931, he was still working on new ideas.
