

Sharing Experiences

A few tips for satisfying conversations with your partners:

- Be active
- Be curious
- Be encouraging
- Be kind
- Be open
- Be tolerant
- Make mistakes
- Be yourself

Everyone was once a child, most are or will become parents. Share your experiences and exchange ideas on being a child and parenting pleasures and challenges. Take turns asking and responding to these questions. Feel free to skip any awkward questions. Listen sympathetically.

1. Where are you in your family's birth order?
2. How old were your parents when you were born?
3. Did your parents ever live with their parents?
4. When you were a baby, who was your primary caretaker?
5. What activities do you remember doing with your mother?
6. What activities do you remember doing with your father?
7. Which of your parents was the main disciplinarian in your family?
8. Were the rules different for girls than for boys?
What about family expectations for girls and boys?
9. Do you remember helping either of your parents with chores?
Which ones?
10. Do you know any parents that hover over their children like a helicopter? Why or why not?
11. What did your parents expect from you as a teenager? Did you rebel?
12. Which parenting duties do you think your parents did well?
13. Do you resemble either of your parents? How?
14. What are you grateful to your parents for?
