The Cantabrian brown bear

The brown bear is found across North America, Europe and Asia. They can live in all sorts of places from the edges of deserts to mountains if they have (41) food and somewhere to rest during the day. Although they are not endangered, they have (42) in some parts of the world. The Cantabrian brown bear is one group that came very close to disappearing. The Cantabrian bear lives in the mountains near the north coast of Spain, which has been their (43) habitat for centuries. As a result of hunting and construction, bear numbers decreased rapidly during the twentieth century. (44) the 1970s, there were only about eighty bears left in the region. (45) they were made a protected species in 1973. Since then, the number of bears in the region has (46) to around 200. The Cantabrian bear is still in danger, but charities are trying to get the message (47) that they need to be protected. They say we can't do (48) them because they help to control other wild animal populations. Working with local governments, they have created conservation areas, which provide a (49) home for the bears. They are also trying to convince local farmers that they can live together. This means that the Cantabrian bear population is very (50) to grow in the future.

My sister Clara was always getting into trouble when she was younger. She could never sit still at school and she was always talking in class. Her teacher, Mr Franks, thought she was a (37) girl so my mum had to go to the school several times to talk about her behaviour. Clara behaved well at home so mum was (38) to find out what was going on. In the first meeting, the teacher explained that Clara hardly ever paid attention to his instructions and that it was becoming (39) to control her. I think this surprised my mum because Clara had never been like this with her. She had always been a (40) girl who was interested in the world around her. At home, you could always have a good conversation with her.

For the next few weeks, my mum and Mr Franks paid special attention to Clara's behaviour and they soon realised that she was getting bored at school. Clara was good at maths and reading, and the things she was studying at school were too easy for her. She would often finish exercises before her classmates and she would become (41) waiting for the others to finish. At first, my mum thought the (42) solution would be to give her more work to do. However, Clara found it difficult to work alone and Mr Franks couldn't spend all his time with her because the other children needed his help as well. In the end, they took the (43) to move her into the next year at school and things changed immediately. Clara became much more interested and her new teacher said she was a very (44) student to have in class.
