

Reading: Identifying attitude

WED 13:02

Zoe: Hello, dear housemates! Just wondering whether anyone else is starting to get a little ... fed up with Tom's behavior. 😊

Max: Yup!

Klara: Tell me about it! He woke me up at three o'clock this morning! Tell me if I'm being unreasonable, but I expect people not to make noise when they come home in the middle of the night. 😞

Javier: I didn't hear a thing.

Max: Javier, nothing wakes you up! For your information, Tom dropped a pan in the kitchen, and then tripped and fell while he was coming up the stairs.

Javier: Yeah, he's a little clumsy sometimes.

Zoe: Personally, I could forgive Tom for coming home late now and then. I'm more annoyed by the fact that he "borrows" food and never actually replaces it. Twice this week, he's finished my orange juice and hasn't even mentioned it. To my mind, that's completely unacceptable.

Max: Totally agree, Zoe. If you want to upset your housemates, taking food without their permission is a really great way to do it! And he never washes the dishes. I'm always having to wash his dirty plates and mugs. To be honest, I think he takes advantage of us. And, OK, he's very charming and funny, but as far as I'm concerned, that's just not enough.

Javier: Yeah, but no one's actually told him, have they? He probably has no idea that he's doing anything wrong. If I were you, I'd talk to him. Generally, people are glad if you tell them how they can improve their behavior.

Klara: Javier, I totally get what you're saying, but Tom is pretty sensitive ...

Max: Javier, what planet are you on? People hate it when you criticize them!

Javier: Well, if you don't say anything, but keep getting mad at him, he'll be more upset. That's for sure! While we're on the topic, if you guys came to our monthly house meetings, you could discuss Tom's behavior with him then. Last time, none of you came. It was just Tom and me. 😊

Klara: That's a good point, Javier. Maybe we should try that.
