

The weather

Read these texts and decide whether the statements below are true or false.

This is today's weather forecast: there will be cold weather in the UK today evening, so expect temperatures below 7°C through all the country. There will be strong winds in the southwest coast of England, and there will be rainy weather in there as well. There is also a high probability of showers in the north of the country, especially in Newcastle. Wherever you live, make sure you carry an umbrella if you leave home, sunny weather still lasts to come.

Tomorrow's weather will be the hottest ever recorded. Temperatures will rise above 45°C in the middle of Australia, so if you live in Alice Springs, stay at home as much as possible. Cities such as Sidney and Brisbane will not experience this extremely hot weather: temperatures will not rise above 30°C in those places. For now, it is seven months since the country experienced rainy or snowy weather.

- Today's weather in the UK is really different from that in Australia.
- Australia usually records temperatures over 45°C in summer.
- The weather in the UK is usually cold and cloudy, even in summer.
- People living in the Southeast coast of Australia will experience extremely hot weather today evening.
- Today it is likely to rain in the North of England.
- People living in Alice Springs can't leave home whenever they want to.
- People living in Newcastle will experience heavy rain today.
- Temperatures in Brisbane won't be extremely hot today.
- The weather in the North of Australia will be foggy and cloudy.
- In the UK, the weather in the south will be different from the weather in the North of the country.

The weather

Fill in the blanks with these words.

Today's weather in the USA

In the US, the weather today will be varied from state to state. In the Northwest of the country, especially in Montana, there will be strong winds weather not just today, but also in the coming days. In the west coast, concretely in Oregon and California, people will enjoy a hot and sunny weather. In the south of the country, strong winds will hit part of Texas. Utah and Colorado, in the mid-west of the country, will experience partly cloudy weather today but will enjoy a sunny weather tomorrow and the coming days. In the south-east, a strong storm will rage the state of Alabama. Not far from there, people from North Carolina and South Carolina will enjoy a partly cloudy weather. Lastly, the state of New York will experience some days of true rain weather.