DRAW TO ORDER THE PARAGRAPHS

Paragraph 1 introduce topic, state your opinion clearly

Secondly, giving kindergarten students foreign language lessons teaches them about diversity. For example, they learn that people in foreign countries speak other languages and have different cultures. As a result, students learn to respect other cultures at a young age.

Paragraph 2 first viewpoint with reasons/ examples/results

All in all, it is my firm belief that teaching foreign languages to kindergarten students prepares them for future language learning and familiarises them with various cultures despite the fact it can delay progress in their mother tongue. Young children have an amazing ability to learn foreign languages, so why not exploiting this as early as possible?

Paragraph 3 second viewpoint with reasons/ examples/results

As Roger Bacon said, "Knowledge of languages is the doorway to wisdom". In my opinion, the best time to introduce children to foreign languages is when they are in kindergarten.

Paragraph 4 opposing viewpoint with reasons/ examples/results

In the first place, teaching foreign languages to kindergarten students means that they are better prepared to learn languages in later life. For instance, even learning the alphabet of a foreign language can be useful. In this way, students would find it easier to learn languages in more detail when they get older.

Paragraph 5 summarise viewpoints, restate your opinion

On the other hand, teaching foreign languages to young children can delay progress in their mother tongue. For instance, when children are still building their basic vocabulary in their own language, learning foreign words might disrupt this. Consequently, students could fall behind in their language
