Yesterday, I went to a bank to open up a savings and checking account. I _____ about $300 every month in my _____ to save money for major purchases or for a rainy day when I have unexpected _____. My paycheck is deposited directly into my _____, and I write out checks to pay my bills. My checking account is free if I maintain a minimum _____ of $25 in the account. I also have about $100 automatically _____ from my checking to my savings account on a monthly basis. The _____ earn very little interest, but it's better than earning nothing. Therefore, I also have a certificate of deposit that earns a higher rate of _____, but I can't _____ the money from the account for one year. Actually, I need money because I'm planning on taking out a student _____ to pay for college tuition. Also, I rent a _____ at the bank and store my valuables there including important documents, some coins and jewelry, and the deed, or ownership record, to my house. Finally, I can _____ my money into the currency of other countries, or I can buy traveler's checks before I depart on a trip.
